SUZANNA LUBRANO 2018

Introduction

Suzanna Lubrano is one of the most popular female artists in Lusophone Africa. In a career spanning almost 20 years, she has scored massive hits in countries such as Angola, Mozambique and Cape Verde, and has also managed to achieve frequent successes elsewhere. She has received numerous music awards and nominations.

In 2015, Suzanna Lubrano has released her latest solo-album 'Vitoria'. Most of the songs on the album are self-composed. The album contains duets with Machel Montano (Trinidad), Iyanya (Nigeria) and Vinicius D'black (Brazil), several productions by Giorgio Tuinfort (producer of songs by Michael Jackson, Rihanna, Lady Gaga and many more), and is more diverse than previous albums.

Although a Cape Verdean singer, Suzanna's music can't be described as specifically Cape Verdean. With her exciting mix of Zouk or Kizomba, Pop Coladeira, R&B and other African and Latino music styles, the 39 year old gifted vocalist has retained her star status in the Portuguese speaking African countries throughout her career, which started in 1996 with the release of her debut album 'Sem Bo Nes Mund'.

CINETEATRO Room 1
Gulliver's Travels

2:15/4:00/7:30/9:30pm

Starring: Jack Black, Jason Segel, Emily Blunt

Director: Rob Letterman

Language: English (Chinese subtitles)

Duration: 93 min

Based on the 18th century novel of the same name, this update sees a slacker mailroom clerk being transported to the land of Lilliput (yes, this is the original name of the mythical land in the novel) after messing up a travel assignment to the Bermuda Triangle. There, the giant (or Beast, as he is affectionately known to the locals), he becomes a hero to the little people, fighting villains and matchmaking a peasant and a princess. When a battle with a petty general goes awry, the roly poly backs out and covers in fear.

Of course, you know this is only temporary - who would be in the mood for an un-happy ending during the festive season?

Suzanna Lubrano — Live at Off-Corso

► CULTURA 24, ZATERDAG T/M WOENSDAG

NA de dvd en televisie-uitzendingen in onder meer Suriname, Portugal, Angola en Brazilië zendt nu ook de publieke omroep een door rtv Rijmond gemaakte opname uit van het concert van de Rotterdams zangers van Kaapverdische afkomst Suzanna Lubrano (1975). Dat concert vond plaats in 2009 in Rotterdam en Candy Dulfer verzorgde er een gastoptreden. Maar omdat al die beschrijvingen toch nooit de lading goed dekken, noemen wij het hier gewoon prachtig. En daar staan we niet alleen in. In 2003 ontving de Rotterdamse een Kora, een onderscheiding voor de beste Afrikaanse muzikante, en van de president van de Kaapverdische Eilanden kreeg ze niet alleen een diplomatiek paspoort, maar in 2009 ook een hoge onderscheiding voor bijzondere prestaties. Wereldwijd klinkt haar stem. In Mozambique bijvoorbeeld, niet alleen op de radio, maar ook vaak als ringtone. Haar albums hebben oorstrelende titels als Tudo pa ba, Fofó en Sem bô nes mundo al blijft daar in de Nederlands vertaling niet zoveel meer van over. Dan wordt het Alles voor jou, Schatje en Zonder jou in de wereld. Op dit moment legt ze de laatste hand aan haar zesde soloalbum; dat wordt in het voorjaar verwacht.

Angie will bring her magic to Kora awards

By Gugu Sibilya

ANGIE Stone, one of the most internationally renowned and respected voices in jazz today, is expected to mesmerise South Africans and the entire continent as they watch the Kora All Africa Music Awards at the Sandton Convention Centre in Sandton tomorrow night.

She will be joined by American rap sensation, Ludacris and the sensational Suzanna from Cape Verde in paying tribute to a number of prominent African musicians.

South Africa will be well represented by artists like Yvonne Chaka-Chaka, Ringo, Gloria Bosman, P-Square, Notre-Dame de la Salette, Ruffone, Jane Osborne, Penny Penny and Joe Shriram.

From the north of Limpopo, the mother will be represented by the Congolese group, G7.

World Music Wednesday

Suzanna Lubrano

Cape Verde Awakens

Wednesday, June 09, 2010

Most fans of world music know the music of Cape Verde only through the odd compilation album or the ubiquitous sounds of Cesaria Evora. Those compilations, however, tend toward on style – the somber, hauntingly beautiful strains of accordion and Portugese-flecked guitar mixed with West African rhythms. It is gorgeous background music – memorable mind you – but still best when relegated to a dinner party mix or meditative workout.

Suzanna Lubrano's approach, however, is very much upfront. Her Cape Verdean zouk is clearly and exuberantly intended for dancing, not dining. And her star is rising with a recent win last week of "Best African Artist of the Disapora" in the prestigious online poll, Museke Online Africa", not an easy feat when fellow voters from the tiny island of Cape Verde have only so many votes to give.

Collaborations like those with Candy Dulfer, former Prince protégé and popular smooth jazz artist, have gained her attention and some key appearances on the European music television circuit. And though she's singing in Portugese, the influences here feel less Afro-Brazil than they are reminiscent of Miami-style Latin pop, a dynamic that's getting Suzanna play from DJ's at concerts and festivals on this side of the pond. This is not crossover music, at least not her part. To fully enjoy Suzanna's gifts, you're gonna have to be the one to crossover to her. We think you should.

After five lingering years, singer Suzanna Lubrano finally returned to the United States and there was clear indication that she had been deeply missed. Following her staggering performance during the Mega concert in Washington DC on April 22nd, Suzanna reconnected with her New England groupies at Club Lido this past Friday.

Without accompaniment, it's tough to tell what kind of music Lubrano is singing. Later that night, before a crowd of 15,000 people, it became clear: Zouk! It's Lubrano's music that's hitting the charts.

JOHANNESBURG — A return to her homeland, the tiny West African state of Cape Verde, was the inspiration that took Suzanna Lubrano to the title of Best African Female Artist 2003 at the Kora All Africa Music Awards at the weekend.

Although Lubrano was born in Cape Verde, she migrated to the Holland with her family when she was four and was away from the country of her birth for more than two decades.

"But when I started singing 10 years ago, I travelled back to my homeland. So, I am renewed ... I have started to grow again in the community.

I have found my roots again."

Lubrano has established herself quickly as the most celebrated Cape Verdean female singer and is enormously popular throughout the Afro-Portuguese world.

She sings primarily in Cape Verdean Creole — with a sprinkling of English to "reach as many people as possible with the message of love."

But she believes people do not need to understand all her lyrics to appreciate her music. "My songs do touch people." She recently released a new album, entitled Tudo Pa Bo.

Kavita | maandag 16 maart 2015 11:30 | 0 reacties

Suzanna Lubrano releast deze maand haar nieuwste album 'Vitoria'. Op het album van de Kaapverdiaanse zangeres uit Rotterdam staan grote internationale namen, zoals socaster Machel Montano en afropop-zanger Iyanya. Van de zeventien tracks, zijn er drie geproduceerd door Giorgio Tuinfort, waaronder 'Stay' met Machel Montano.

Heftige openingstrack

Suzanna heeft een heftige periode achter de rug, waarin huiselijk geweld een grote rol speelde. Ook werd ze beschuldigd van het ontvoeren van haar eigen kinderen. De zangeres begint haar album daarom met de track 'Mudjer Forti'. Een heftig nummer dat geïnspireerd is op haar ervaringen.
