

DAVE★EVANS

Biography

Dave Evans is a Welsh-born rock and roll musician who settled in North Queensland with his family at the age of five. At 17, he formed his first band called "In Session" in Charters Towers before moving to Sydney. There he helped form a band with Malcolm Young, Colin Burgess, and Larry van Kriedt, with Malcolm's younger brother Angus joining a week later. As such, one of the greatest rock bands of all time was formed, AC/DC, thanks to Angus' sister-in-law Sandra who came up with the name, signifying power and energy.

On New Year's Eve in 1973, AC/DC took to the stage for their very first gig at the Chequers Nightclub in Sydney. Despite being relatively unknown at the time, the band quickly built a devoted following with their energetic live performances. They followed up their initial success by recording their debut single, "Can I Sit Next To You Girl" b/w "Rocking In The Parlour", which achieved great commercial success and quickly climbed the national charts.

Around this time, guitarist Angus Young began wearing his iconic schoolboy uniform, which would go on to become a signature element of the band's image. However, life on the road was not easy for AC/DC. Frictions and egos began to increase steadily, culminating in a physical altercation between lead singer Dave Evans and the band's manager. This ultimately led to Evans' departure from AC/DC and the end of his tenure as the band's front man.

Back in the day, Bon Scott was tight with Malcolm and Angus' big brother, George Young, who was a talented player in the legendary band Easybeats ("Friday On My Mind") and a well-known record producer with Harry Vanda. George caught the band's gig in Adelaide and was so impressed, he jumped on board with AC/DC. At the time, the band was already killin' it as one of the freshest and most electrifying rock bands in Australia. With George on their team, they went on to reach the pinnacle of rock and roll stardom as one of the biggest bands in the world, achieving true rock and roll immortality.

After departing from AC/DC, Dave Evans joined the emerging hard rock band, Rabbit, in early 1975. Evans was impressed by their in-your-face stage presence when he saw them perform at Chequers nightclub in Sydney, and they were already a sensation in Newcastle and surrounding areas. With CBS Records, Rabbit recorded their first album titled "Rabbit," which saw some success. The band gained national popularity after the release of their second album, "Too Much Rock and Roll," and their appearances on various television pop and rock shows.

Rabbit was known for their wild and frenzied live performances, and Dave Evans himself was described as a hardcore ladies' man. The after-show parties were always widely loved and attracted plenty of groupies, fans, and friends looking for a good time. "Too Much Rock And Roll" (1976) was a hit album that was distributed worldwide, including countries like Japan, Germany, and France. Even though sales were decent, Rabbit didn't tour these countries because two members quit after a gruelling three-month tour in Australia. The band kept going after adding a new drummer and dropped the single "Let Me," but it wasn't the same vibe without the original members, and the band called it quits in 1978.

Dave Evans bounced back a few years later, with Thunder Down Under formed in 1984, and he signed with independent label Reaction Records, releasing the album "Dave Evans & Thunder Down Under." After Dave Evans and Thunder Down Under parted ways a few years later, he turned his attention to acting and landed roles in small-time Aussie flicks and live theatre. In early 2000, Dave received a special invitation to be a guest of honor at the 20th-anniversary memorial gig for Bon Scott, performed by Melbourne AC/DC tribute band Thunderstruck. The electrifying performance was recorded live, and the album titled "A Hell of a Night" was later released through Perris Records.

Dave Evans, the rock 'n' roll legend, signed a global distribution and publishing agreement with Blue Pie in 2009, releasing his classic rock album "Sinner." Widely regarded as a masterpiece, the album's track "Sinner" was even nominated for Best Rock Song at the LA Music Awards. The single "Sold My Soul to Rock n Roll" was promoted globally to radio and media since July 2009, further cementing Dave's status as a rock icon. Fans can find his music at all leading digital retailers and music stores worldwide.

Recently, Dave has been touring Latin America with his band, performing in some of the biggest rock festivals in the region. In 2023, he embarked on the "50th Anniversary of AC/DC" tour, where he performed the classic hits of his former band in honour of their milestone anniversary. The tour included shows in major cities across Latin America. In addition to performing his own tour with his band, Dave Evans has also embarked on separate tours such as the "Icons Of Classic Rock" 2023 World Tour, featuring acts such as Dave Bickler, Fran Cosmo, Johnny Edwards and more iconic names. Dave's electrifying performances have wowed audiences and proved that he's still rocking as hard as ever, with no sign of stopping.

Dave Evans is a Blue Pie Records USA artist and is published for selected titles by Blue Pie Publishing USA (ASCAP).
